

Stefanos Michiotis

Stefanos lives and works in Athens, Greece as a business consultant and certified adult trainer; he owns an MSc in Management Engineer (National Technical University of Athens, 1985) and currently he is a PhD researcher in Change Archetypes modeling (University of Greenwich Business School). His professional interests are related to leadership, organizational culture and change, knowledge and conflict resolution.

He is long experienced in teaching and using techniques and tools that help organizations to make sense and deal with complex and intractable problems or chaotic situations. In a recent Public Consultation project that he led in four Greek municipalities, the underlying patterns of the citizens and authorities that influence their social and environmental behavior have been explored and imprinted by using a narrative-based approach.

Furthermore, he provides consulting services to a wide range of public organizations and private firms and he participates in research programs and studies carried out by universities and consulting firms. Over the previous phases of his professional career he had also set up and directed training centers on behalf of public sector and had managed several innovative programs, some of which had been evaluated as best practice in Europe and Greece.

Currently he is the founder and scientific director of a private consulting firm, a member of the Board of Advisors of a Greek NGO and member in various professional associations, scientific communities and international networks of practitioners (Cognitive Edge, Presencing Institute etc).

He can be reached at: stefanos@tetras-consult.gr or stefan@euronet.org.gr.

Athens, 2008